Additional Physiatry '26 Sessions –

Washington Update Year-in-Review: What You Need to Know. Past, Present, Future.

Thursday February 19, 8:15 AM – 9:15 AM

Greg Worsowicz, MD, MBA; Clinton Faulk, MD; Chris Rorick, MPA; Chloe Slocum, MD, MPH

Is it GME (funding or positions), research (direct or indirect funding), advocacy (how and where), or another HOT issue facing our field? Join this panel of experts for a year-in-review of Washington and legislative updates on the issues that have and will impact the field of Physical Medicine and Rehabilitation. Learn about what has happened, what is about to happen, and future legislative/regulatory items that academic physiatrists need to understand.

Reaching the Dean's Office

Friday, February 20, 8:15 AM – 9:15 AM

Ross Zafonte, DO; Raj Mitra, MD

Learners in academic medicine often focus on clinical, research, and teaching responsibilities without fully understanding the institutional priorities that shape their environment. This session bridges that gap by exploring the internal dynamics of academic leadership—financial realities, fundraising pressures, success metrics, and research priorities. Gaining this insight empowers learners to navigate their careers more strategically and align their goals with institutional expectations. Through presentations, Q&A with leaders, and case-based discussions, participants will learn how decisions are made at the leadership level and how to contribute meaningfully to their institution's mission while preparing for future leadership roles.

From Advocacy to Action: Engaging Learners in Activism to Build and Expand a PM&R Career

Saturday, February 21, 10:15 AM – 11:15 AM

Monica Verduzco-Gutierrez, MD; John Sanchez, MD, MPH; Ashlee Jaffee, MD, Med; Kayleigh D. Crane, BS; Lisa Y. Gong, BS, MA, Grace Olson, BA, MA; Rekha P. Swamy, BA

Advocacy is a powerful tool for shaping the future of rehabilitation medicine, improving patient outcomes, advancing health policy, and promoting diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI). Engaging learners in activism not only enhances their education but also opens doors for career growth in academic medicine, leadership, and policy. This session will explore how physiatrists can incorporate advocacy training into education, inspire learners to take action, and leverage activism to build fulfilling careers. Panelists will share personal journeys, discuss successful strategies, and guide participants in mapping their own career paths through advocacy-driven work.
